

Plug your application
into the greater
New York City
healthcare market.
Once and for all.

BHIX delivers the greater New York City healthcare market to information technology and diagnostic vendors through its integration and information utility.

By integrating your application once with BHIX, you provide a valuable new feature to your customers – instant information exchange with the greater New York City healthcare community. Plus, you save on the otherwise long and costly process of connecting to each of the many and diverse healthcare entities.

BHIX

Clinical applications as well as patient self-management, orders and results reporting and analytics systems can plug into the power of BHIX for access to the broadest range of information from the diverse healthcare community in the greater New York City area.

Plugging into BHIX

When you plug your application into BHIX, built on InterSystems HealthShare™ technology, you gain the benefits of a comprehensive set of health information exchange services. Through efficient and meaningful exchanges of medical data, BHIX helps to eliminate gaps in patient care across healthcare settings. Your systems will support better care coordination, better clinical outcomes, and vastly improved customer satisfaction.

About BHIX

Reflecting New York City's diverse ethnic and socioeconomic populations, BHIX began in 2005 as a group of providers seeking to improve the quality of care across care settings. Initial participants included a consortium of hospitals, nursing homes, home health providers and insurers looking to create an infrastructure for clinical data exchange.

In 2007, BHIX became incorporated as an independent, not-for-profit, non-governmental New York Corporation charged with technical implementations and strategic initiatives. Today, BHIX, in conjunction with vendor partners, has expanded its network to include additional hospitals, long-term and home health providers, ambulatory care centers, physician practices, insurers and city and state agencies throughout New York.
